Q1 2026 Fund Commentary

Commentary and opinions are provided by Mackenzie Investments.

Market commentary

North American economies diverged notably in the first quarter. Canada's economy remained under pressure from trade uncertainty and a soft labour market, with employment declining in January and February before stabilizing in March. The U.S. economy started the year with resilient consumer spending and business investment, but market sentiment deteriorated sharply after the outbreak of the conflict in the Middle East in late February raised concerns about energy prices and inflation.

Monetary policy remained on hold in both countries throughout the quarter. The Bank of Canada held its policy rate at 2.25% at both its January and March meetings, while the U.S. Federal Reserve Board maintained the federal funds rate at 3.50%–3.75% at the same meetings. Canada's unemployment rate was 6.7% in March, and the U.S. rate was 4.3%.

Small- and mid-capitalization equity markets in both Canada and the U.S. had a volatile but broadly resilient quarter compared to their large-cap peers. In Canada, the S&P/TSX SmallCap Index posted strong gains in January and February, supported by rising commodity prices and improved risk appetite, before giving back much of those gains in a sharp March selloff. Energy-oriented smaller companies benefited from the surge in crude oil prices while broader domestically focused names lagged. In the U.S., the Russell 2000 Index gained roughly 1%, outperforming the S&P 500 Index, which fell about 4.4%, as smaller companies had less exposure to the technology names that weighed most heavily on the broad market. Energy and materials contributed positively in both markets, while consumer and technology sectors were more mixed.

Performance

Stock selection in the financials sector contributed to the Fund's performance. CES Energy Solutions Corp. contributed to performance because of strong execution, continued market share gains and record financial results that reinforced confidence in the company's earnings trajectory. Tamarack Valley Energy Ltd. also contributed to performance because of growing confidence in its waterflood-driven free cash flow profile and shareholder returns strategy.

The materials sector was the largest detractor from the Fund's performance. Underweight positioning in the sector and stock selection within the sector both detracted. The real estate sector also detracted from performance because of overweight exposure in a weak sector and stock selection. The health care sector detracted because of overweight exposure in a lagging sector combined with stock selection challenges. Certain health care holdings are more closely tied to the information technology sector, which was under pressure from concerns about artificial intelligence (AI) disruption.

Badger Infrastructure Solutions Ltd. was the top individual detractor from performance because of results that raised investor concerns around near-term margin progression and a larger planned capital program. TerraVest Industries Inc. also detracted from performance because of softer quarterly results and near-term project timing delays.
