Q3 2025 Fund Commentary

Market commentary

Global equities rose during the period led by emerging markets as enthusiasm for artificial intelligence investment strengthened Chinese information technology stocks. Developed market equities rose, notably in North America and Japan. U.S. stocks were supported by the macroeconomic backdrop and expectations interest-rate cuts, while Japanese equities were fueled by expectations of fiscal support.

U.S. equity markets brushed aside labour market weakness and persistent inflation to focus on strong earnings and fading recession fears. European equities declined as political volatility in France, fiscal concerns in Germany and weaker growth in peripheral economies lowered regional returns. The European Central Bank remained cautious, with markets pricing in limited monetary easing because of inflation.

Emerging market equities outperformed developed market equities, led by China. Despite weak domestic demand, a strong rebound in large-capitalization information technology stocks led markets higher.

Performance

The Fund's overweight exposure to FTAI Aviation Ltd., Sapiens International Corp. NV and Bel Fuse Inc. contributed to performance. Overweight exposure to Kyndryl Holdings Inc., Nomad Foods Ltd. and Marex Group PLC detracted from the Fund's performance.

At the stock level, selection within U.S. and international small-capitalization stocks detracted from performance, as did underweight exposure to international small-caps equities.

Portfolio activity

The sub-advisor added Fidelis Insurance Holdings Ltd., GlobalData PLC, Accelleron Industries AG, Cellebrite DI Ltd., Business Engineering Corp. and Bath & Body Works Inc. Atkore Inc., Sapiens and Tecan Group AG were sold. Tel Aviv Stock Exchange Ltd., Insperity Inc., Franklin Covey Co. and Pason Systems Inc. were reduced.

Outlook

U.S. tariffs increased costs for importers and squeezed the margins of exporting companies, forcing them to absorb some of the costs of sending goods abroad. Higher yields in many countries have increased the cost of debt funding, which may impact small- and medium-sized companies with higher proportional debt. Monetary policy easing from some central banks has put downward pressure on yields at the short end of the curve. The sub-advisor believes this could assist businesses with shorter debt maturations.
