Q1 2026 Fund Commentary

Commentary and opinions are provided by Mackenzie Investments.

Market commentary

The global natural resources sector experienced a dramatic shift in the first quarter, driven by escalating geopolitical tensions in the Middle East. Crude oil prices rose steadily through January and February as the risk of a broader conflict increased, then surged sharply in March after the conflict in the region intensified and the Strait of Hormuz was effectively closed in early March, disrupting a significant portion of global oil supply.

Brent crude began the quarter at about USD$61 per barrel and surpassed USD$100 per barrel in mid-March, ending the quarter near USD$118 per barrel, one of the largest quarterly supply disruptions in global oil market history. Natural gas prices also rose as LNG exports through the Strait of Hormuz were constrained. Gold offered a different story, reaching an all-time high of USD$5,589 per ounce in January as investors sought lower-risk assets amid rising geopolitical uncertainty, before pulling back to close the quarter near USD$4,600 per ounce.

Canadian energy equities rose substantially as oil prices surged, with producers and pipeline companies benefiting from the sharp improvement in commodity prices. International energy equities also advanced, though the magnitude of gains varied by region and company. Canadian and international gold mining companies saw mixed performance in line with gold's volatile quarter, strong early gains followed by a sharp correction in March. Base metals were broadly stable as industrial demand signals remained mixed.

Performance

An overweight allocation to Brazil contributed to the Fund's performance. An underweight allocation to Switzerland also contributed.

Saturn Oil & Gas Inc. was the top contributor to performance, benefiting from rapid balance sheet improvement. SM Energy Co. also contributed to performance after integrating recently acquired assets and resetting production levels.

An underweight allocation to the energy sector and stock selection within energy detracted the most from performance.

Exxon Mobil Corp. was the primary detractor from performance. Metals and mining equities including Capstone Copper Corp. and Rio2 Ltd. also detracted as strong prior gains reversed following the onset of conflict in the Middle East.

Portfolio activity

The sub-advisor added SM Energy as part of a repositioning from gold and copper exposure toward energy. The sub-advisor also increased Ovintiv Inc. as part of the same repositioning.

Lundin Gold Inc. was sold and Barrick Mining Corp. was reduced
